Engineer injured in hovercraft explosion

Smoke from the fire at Bengal Lane in Greens Norton after the explosion in Mick Broom's workshop

A TOP engineer who helped lead the development of Hesketh motorbikes in Northamptonshire had to be airlifted to hospital after he was caught in an explosion while working on a hovercraft.

Mick Broom was airlifted to the Queen Elizabeth Hospital in Birmingham for treatment to burns after the accident in Bengal Lane, Greens Norton, on Tuesday afternoon.

Neighbour James Shepherd-Cross rushed to the scene after hearing gas cylinders explode in the workshop where Mr Broom was working.

He said: "I was one of the first on the scene. I heard an explosion and saw black smoke coming out of the place, so I ran out there.

"The cylinders were still going off at the time. I knew the best thing I could do was to put water on him, so I put a hose on him and kept it on. It was awful.

"But the air ambulance and the paramedics were there incredibly quickly."

Houses within 300ft of Mr Broom's workshop were evacuated for 24 hours after the explosion and the fire service set up a cordon around the building because they feared more gas cylinders on the site could explode.

Northamptonshire's chief fire officer, Martyn Emberson, was called to the scene along with 30 other firefighters.

He said: "The gentleman was doing some work on a hovercraft that was in the garage.

"What actually happened, we don't know, but one of the garages is now just a burned-out shell and some of the cylinders that were in there have exploded.

"We had to set up the exclusion zone because we take gas cylinders very seriously. If they explode, projectiles can be blown over a very long distance."

Mr Broom began working for Lord Hesketh at Easton Neston House in 1979 on a project to build motorbikes.

He worked as the development engineer for the company, which was originally based in Easton Neston's stable block.

During three decades working on Hesketh bikes, Mr Broom estimates that he has built about 250 of the machines.

'Tash will always be my baby girl'

Natasha Warnes' mother Emma Keasley said she was struggling to come to terms with her daughter's death

THE mother of Natasha Warnes has said she does not know how she is going to come to terms with her daughter's tragic death.

The 16-year-old former Northampton School for Boys (NSB) student was found dead in her bedroom on Thursday.

In messages posted on her Facebook site, Natasha's mum, Emma Keasley, said: "I miss the noise in the house - music being played, the petty little arguments in the house between Tash and her sister Sam.

"Tash will always be my 16-year-old baby girl and I can't come to terms with that yet. I never wanted this, I just wish she had gone off the rails and got absolutely wrecked so we had a platform to work off to get her better again. I'm so sad. I can't take on board the enormity of everything that has happened. There were no warning signs, Tash was helping with the packing and looking forward to college, music school and our holiday in France. We were going to eat cake in the car on the journey home from France as it was going to be her 17th birthday. I don't know how to come to terms with what has happened."

In the days after news of Natasha's death broke, dozens of flowers and tributes have been left on Abington Street and hundreds of messages have been posted on social networking sites in memory of the talented teenager who was a violinist with the Northamptonshire Youth Orchestra.

Natasha's grandfather, Terry Warnes, said the number of tributes that had been left for the teenager in Abington Street had "touched the family's heart".

He said: "I was very impressed with the amount of friends she had in town and it showed much they loved and cared for her. I thought they were fine young people. She was such a gifted girl and was very loved."

Natasha's parents, Mark and Emma, said a small memorial service would be held in a church for close friends and family and attendance would be invitation only.

Mr Warnes said there would also probably be a memorial event involving music but the details of this had yet to be decided.

THE NEW leader of Northampton Borough Council has pledged to bring back a 'traditional Christmas' to Northampton.

Over the past few years, the town has had its Christmas lights switch-on replaced by a mixture of parades and special events held throughout the town centre.

Last year, the highlight of the town's festive season was a winter-themed parade through the town featuring an acrobatic display and a performance by a group of artists dressed as a tea set.

But the new leader of Northampton Borough Council, Councillor David Palethorpe (Con, Billing) has said he now wants to see a return to a traditional lights switch-on, complete with a visit from Santa and a celebrity to switch the lights on.

He said: "There will be a proper switch-on this year. We've started talking about it already and our intention is for it to be spectacular."

The current leader of the council made national headlines in 2007 when he was featured in the Daily Mail, criticising the then Liberal Democrat-led council for scaling

Last year's Christmas celebrations featured displays by acrobats and a 'Christmas tea party' with artists dressed as tea cups back Northampton's Christmas lights. He later also criticised the council for buying fake plastic trees instead of real ones.

He said he now hoped the town's Christmas celebrations would be something to be proud of.

He said: "We are starting work on this Christmas's plans now, and for 2012 we'll start work on that year's events in January."

The council is working on plans for this year's switch-on with the Royal & Derngate Theatres, the Grosvenor Centre, Northamptonshire County Council and Northampton Town Centre Ltd, a group set up to improve the town centre.

A PENSIONER with terminal cancer living in a Northamptonshire village said she feels she has been left "stranded at home waiting to die" after the bus service to her nearest town was cancelled.

Violet Ford, aged 77, who has pancreatic cancer, says she has felt "marooned" at home since the X46 bus service through Mears Ashby was scrapped in May.

Mrs Ford, who lives with her 82-year-old husband John, said she is unable to travel to the shops in Earls Barton or the doctor's surgery in Wellingborough without relying on lifts from friends and family.

Mrs Ford said: "I feel I've deteriorated since May as I've not been able to get out and meet any of my friends. I just can't go anywhere. I feel as if my human rights have been taken away."

"I don't just want to be sat at home waiting to die."

However a spokesman for Northamptonshire County Council said Mrs Ford would be able to use a community car scheme run by the Wellingborough Volunteer Bureau provided specifically to help elderly and disabled residents of Wellingborough to attend medical appointments.

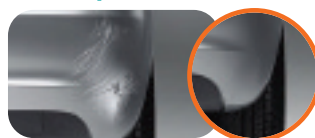

The spokesman said: "The village of Mears Ashby has retained its service to Northampton as well as having a new two-hourly service to Kettering six days a week. In addition, the community bus scheme accepts bookings right up till noon for next-day journeys."

MPs given free tickets

THE two MPs for Northampton have been given free tickets to some of Britain's poshest social events, by one of the world's largest tobacco firms.

Both the Conservative MP for Northampton North, Michael Ellis, and his colleague for Northampton South, Brian Binley, were given tickets worth £1,132 to this year's Chelsea Flower Show by Japan Tobacco International – which sells brands such as Benson & Hedges and Camel cigarettes.

Mr Binley also received two tickets worth £1,132 to the Glyndebourne opera festival from the firm.

The MPs have been criticised by some opposition politicians who have said it is wrong for them to accept such gifts.

But Mr Ellis argued that it was right for MPs to hold talks with companies which employ large workforces and pay lots of tax.

He said: "I meet many people from many businesses that are entitled to talk to me about issues they find important.

"But I will make up my own mind and nobody is going to influence me with any form of hospitality on the decisions I make."

Before he was elected in May last year, Mr Ellis highlighted the concerns of newsgagents in Northampton about Government plans to force them to take cigarettes off general display in their shops. Mr Binley has also been an outspoken opponent of the smoking ban.

But Mr Ellis said it was wrong to assume MPs would have their views on smoking swayed by gifts from cigarette firms. The barrister, who has said he 'loathes smoking', said: "I disapprove of smoking and I always have done.

"No kind of hospitality is going to change how I feel."

He was backed by Mr Binley, who added: "I only support one thing as far as cigarettes are concerned and that's a review of the smoking ban, on the basis that there are better ways of doing it."

Japan Tobacco International invited 13 MPs to the Chelsea Flower Show. It is believed the cost of providing each MP with a pair of tickets was about £100, but the cost of lunch and tea pushed the price up to £1,132 per MP.

A spokesman for the firm said:

"Like many other businesses, we invite politicians and their parliamentary staff to certain events as they provide an opportunity for us to engage with them about our company in an open and transparent way."

But county councillor Sally Beardsworth (Lib Dem, Kingsthorpe) who is a former Marie Curie Nurse, said the MPs were wrong to accept the free tickets, adding: "I really don't know what they were thinking. They're earning good salaries so if they really want to go to the Chelsea Flower Show, they should pay for themselves."

Other gifts, benefits and hospitality declared by the county's MPs included a fee of £632 for writing an article for The Sun newspaper, which was claimed by Corby's Conservative MP, Louise Mensch, who recently took on Rupert Murdoch in Parliament. She also received £1,620 for an appearance on Have I Got News For You, while Daventry's Conservative MP, Chris Heaton-Harris, declared gifts of £10 of pet food, a £30 bottle of whisky and several fees of £30 for refereeing football matches.

PATIENTS and staff have claimed at least £1.3 million for accidents and negligence against NHS Northamptonshire in the last six years.

Figures revealed by health bosses show 23 claims since 2005, with total costs and lawyers' fees of more than £1.3m. But the cost to the primary care trust could be much higher as a total has not yet been decided for seven of the cases.

The highest claim listed came from a case in October 2005 where a private hospital, on behalf of the NHS, botched a total knee replacement, installing a component that was too large and was cemented inside the patient in error.

The patient, who was in pain and had to undergo more operations, claimed £175,000 in damages plus costs, which brought the total bill, finally agreed last year, to more than £328,000.

There have so far been 11 claims brought in 2011, totalling £393,200. They include a case where an out of hours nurse who did not check a diabetic patient's medical history properly when they reported symptoms of diseased blood vessels. They later had a heart attack which caused brain damage, although expert opinion has since suggested no link between the advice and the injury.

Claims closed during 2011 included a patient at Danetre Hospital, Daventry, in 2004 who was diagnosed with gastroenteritis and was not referred to A&E but was later found to have appendicitis.

Casings found in US murder

COURT papers released by Florida officials revealed detectives investigating the murder of a holidaymaker from Northampton found bullet casings buried underground months after the shooting.

The legal papers, released in Sarasota, revealed police officers investigating the murders of James Kouzaris, aged 24, and his friend James Cooper, aged 25, found .22 calibre shell casings buried underground three months after the two university friends were gunned down.

Former Northampton School for Boys pupil Mr Kouzaris, pictured, from Kingsthorpe, and Mr Cooper were murdered after they wandered into a run-down housing project in Sarasota late on April 16.

The fresh papers reveal police interviewed close friends of 16-year-old Shawn Tyson, who has since been charged with the double murder, on suspicion of unrelated matters to establish the identity of a second man seen fleeing the murder scene.

The newly released documents also reveal Tyson is alleged to have bragged about the double murder to friends.

Detectives found Tyson, a suspected member of the feared Second Line gang that has plagued parts of Sarasota, had called friends in the minutes after the shooting and reportedly bragged he and the second man, who has not been charged, had tried to rob the tourists.

Police were then led to a number of .22-calibre shell casings, handed by Tyson to a friend just hours after the shooting. Both Mr Cooper and Mr Kouzaris were shot dead with a .22 calibre weapon.

THE mystery buyer of a disused toilet block in Daventry has been revealed to be a Northampton councillor with a history of buying unusual property.

Councillor Iftikhar Choudary (Lab, Abington) bought the toilet block in Chapel Lane, Daventry last week for £47,500, almost ten times what auctioneers had expected it could fetch.

He plans to convert the building into a community hall, similar to the one he has opened at the former Mill Wheel pub in Billing Brook Road, Lumbertubs, which is now known as Brookside Hall.

He said: "After they saw the success of Brookside Hall, a group of people in Daventry approached me and said they needed my help. It's a group that has been using the town's old fire station as a community hall, but they heard about what we were doing at Brookside Hall and said they would like to do something similar. And I'll be happy to put something back into the community that has done so much for me."

Auctioneers estimated the toilet block, which was closed by Daventry District Council in 2009, would sell for between £5,000 and £10,000. But at the auction at Franklin's Gardens in Northampton, three people became involved in a bidding war.

Councillor Choudary said: "We want to start the conversion work as soon as the planners will let us because we want to improve the area and provide a service for the town."

Care worries

CONCERNS have been raised about the care of two vulnerable adults from Northamptonshire living in facilities run by Castlebeck, whose staff were caught on camera abusing residents.

The BBC's Panorama broadcasted footage in May taken at the now-closed Winterbourne View residential hospital in Bristol, run by Castlebeck, that showed staff yanking residents by the hair, hitting and whipping them and dragging them out of bed.

The images caused the Care Quality Commission to investigate the other Castlebeck services across the country and the watchdog last week published concerns about 11 of the 23 services.

It is understood 14 residents from Northamptonshire with either learning disabilities, brain injuries or mental health problems are currently at Castlebeck homes.

NHS Northamptonshire has 10 patients – plus one jointly funded with the county council – in eight Castlebeck homes across England and Scotland. Nine have learning disabilities and two have acquired brain injuries.

Health bosses said NHS Northamptonshire staff, as well as the county council, have now visited the Castlebeck NHS patients and reviewed the quality and safety of their care. As a result, concerns have been raised over the care of two Northamptonshire patients.

A spokeswoman for NHS Northamptonshire said: "Following these reviews, NHS Northamptonshire's Continuing Healthcare Service (CHC) is considering the appropriateness of the placement of four of the individuals and whether an alternative care setting would be better. Safeguarding issues have been raised in respect of two residents at two Castlebeck facilities. These investigations have been carried out by the area local authority, liaising with the CHC team."

The county council said one of its residents was at a Castlebeck service that the CQC had said needs to improve: "We have been working over some time with the individual to ensure appropriate arrangements are in place to meet their needs."

Strictly selling

NEARLY 550 tickets have already been sold for the Chronicle & Echo's Strictly Come Dancing-style competition.

Strictly Northampton takes place at Royal & Derngate on Saturday, November 26.

The event, sponsored by Barclaycard, will see 16 couples go head-to-head on the dance floor for one night only for the chance to lift the winners' trophy, and to raise cash for the Chron and Macmillan Cancer Support's £1.55 million appeal to fund a new blood cancer treatment unit at Northampton General Hospital.

It follows the success of last year's Strictly Chron Dancing, which raised more than £13,000 for the same fund.

Tickets for Strictly Northampton went on sale two weeks ago, and so far 540 have been sold.

Among those who have signed up to take part in Strictly Northampton are Northamptonshire Police deputy chief constable Suzette Davenport, former Saints and England rugby player Ian Hunter, Chron sports writer Tom Vickers, singer and television presenter Isla St Clair, Mayor of Northampton Jamie Lane, motorcycle racer Maria Costello, and Royal & Derngate chief executive Martin Sutherland.

To buy tickets call Northampton 624811 or visit www.royalnderngate.co.uk

County is showing its got some great talent

A 17-YEAR-OLD singer and guitarist became the first act to be put through to the semi-final of Northampton's Got Talent after a high quality live audition in the Grosvenor Shopping Centre.

Former Quinton House School pupil, Jade Duckett, impressed judges with a performance of the Lady Gaga hit Born This Way on Monday.

In front of a packed crowd in the shopping centre, the teenager confidently performed her own interpretation of the song without a backing track.

The three judges in the live auditions are Mandie Smith, marketing manager at the Grosvenor Centre, Market Square events organiser Becky Allen, and Chronicle & Echo reporter Callum Jones.

Ms Duckett, of St James, Northampton, said: "I'm really happy. I really enjoy performing in front of people and I'm looking forward to the semi-final. I will be singing a different song."

The first live audition of this year's contest also featured twin brother and sister Robert and Lucinda Barron, both singers and guitarists aged 13, who also received positive comments from the judges.

Performing Baby by Justin Bieber, with his sister Ellie dancing alongside him, Robert was commended for his "infectious smile" and confident stage persona.

Lucinda received praise for her "fantastic" singing voice and mature rendition of Natasha Bedingfield's Soulmate.

The audition also included a performance by 79-year-old Reginald Beaven, who received praise from the judges for his "endearing" rendition of Singing The Blues.

Auditions are being held in the Grosvenor Centre every day from 1pm.

Major blow as Holt is out for six weeks

ANDY HOLT has been ruled out of the start of the season after it was confirmed the Cobblers player-coach has dislocated a shoulder in training.

The news is described as 'a major blow' by Town boss Gary Johnson, who was planning to use Holt as a centre-back, and who will now turn his attention to giving non-contract defender Ashley Westwood more of a role around the squad.

With just days to go until the npower League Two campaign, the injury leaves Johnson with just Byron Webster and John Johnson as his centre-back options, although it now appears Westwood will be in that mix, and will possibly be among the substitutes for Saturday's game against Accrington at Sixfields.

"Holt was going to be our next centre-back, we were moulding him into that role, and he's picked up this injury just when he was about ready to come in and do that," said the Cobblers boss.

"He went to hospital with it and he's going to be out for a couple of weeks and this is when the Ashley Westwoods of this world come in handy to have around.

"It's a major blow because he's one of our stalwarts and although we probably wouldn't have had him anyway because of his fitness, he would have been on the bench as he rebuilt that.

"He went in with the goalkeeper and got a touch to it but the goalkeeper clipped him accidentally and he just fell awkwardly.

"It's a blow to him and us, but he has at least got some time to swot up on his coaching manuals!"

At 35, Westwood would eclipse Holt as the squad's oldest member and make him one of just two players in their thirties on the books at Sixfields at present.

Johnson has been impressed with what the former Town defender has done in training and practice matches, and feels he has both the skills on the field and the leadership qualities to be a good addition to the squad.

"He's going to be a non-contract player but if everybody feels he can be a part of it then we'll look at it again," he said.

"He's trained very well and I'm pleased with that. He's done well in a couple of practice games and he deserves a bit of an opportunity.

"We need some players around who have been there before to guide the younger ones who haven't through certain situations."

Bench role is tough for Kiwi

MARK SORENSON admits adjusting to life on the bench in his first year at Saints was difficult.

But the powerful second row feels he has become a better player for the lessons learned after a year at Franklin's Gardens.

Sorenson was a key man at Newcastle Falcons before switching to Northampton, where he found first-team starts much harder to come by.

It was a new experience for the 32-year-old Kiwi, who was a regular starter in his homeland with Bay of Plenty before leaving in 2006 and becoming a fans' favourite at Kingston Park.

He admits it took time to adjust to life on the bench at the Gardens, but fully understood boss Jim Mallinder's decision to consistently select England ace Courtney Lawes and Christian Day.

"There is a different mindset," said Sorenson on his role as substitute. "You've got to be ready from minute one to 80 and you warm up as though you're starting and you warm up during the game.

"It's good and you try to speak to people who've done it before, and a bit more often but it's a good role and enjoyable and tense when you get out there straight into it too so it's a lot of fun as well.

"You want to be starting but when guys are playing really well you realise that and you can only do what you do on the training pitch."

Sorenson, who was supporters' player of the season and players' player of the season at Newcastle during the 2007/08 season, moved to Saints in search of major silverware.

He just missed out last year as Mallinder's men lost in the Heineken Cup final and the Aviva Premiership semi-finals but nevertheless those were occasions which the abrasive lock relished.

And now he is fully settled in Northampton, he is now aiming for more success this season during which he is likely to play a big part with Lawes away at the World Cup.

Sorenson said: I've settled really quickly. I was happy with my involvement in the squad last year so it's just a matter of hopefully keeping injury-free and available."
